INTRODUCTION

English grammar is a fundamental component of language proficiency and communication skills. Traditional grammar teaching methods often rely on rote memorization and repetitive exercises, which may not effectively engage students or promote deep understanding. With the advent of technology and new pedagogical theories, innovative approaches to grammar instruction have emerged. This thesis investigates these modern methods, evaluating their effectiveness compared to conventional techniques and exploring how they can be implemented to improve grammar learning.

Research materials and methodology

The research employs a mixed-methods approach, utilizing both qualitative and quantitative data collection methods. Primary data is gathered through surveys and interviews with English language teachers and students from various educational institutions. Secondary data includes an extensive review of academic journals, books, and online resources on grammar teaching methods. The study also incorporates classroom observations and the use of grammar teaching software to assess student progress and engagement.

Research results

The findings reveal that innovative teaching methods, such as the use of interactive software, gamification, and collaborative learning, significantly enhance student engagement and understanding of English grammar. Traditional methods, while still useful, often fail to maintain student interest and do not fully address the diverse learning needs of students. Technology-driven approaches provide immediate feedback and create dynamic learning environments that encourage active participation.

Discussion

The discussion highlights the benefits and challenges of integrating innovative methods into grammar teaching. It emphasizes the importance of a balanced approach that combines traditional and modern techniques to cater to different learning styles. The role of technology is discussed in detail, showcasing its potential to transform grammar instruction through interactive and personalized learning experiences. Strategies for overcoming common obstacles, such as limited resources and resistance to change, are also explored.

Conclusion

The thesis concludes that modern methods of teaching English grammar, particularly those leveraging technology and interactive learning, offer significant advantages over traditional techniques. These innovative approaches not only improve student engagement and comprehension but also prepare learners for real-world communication. Ongoing professional development for teachers and continuous adaptation of teaching strategies are essential for maximizing the benefits of these methods.
